Scientific Program

Major advances have recently been made in our understanding of inflammatory mechanisms. These discoveries are now being used as the basis for a new generation of therapeutics, and this satellite symposium will focus on recent advances in the fields of cytokine actions, arachidonate metabolites, cellular adhesion events and novel anti-inflammatory strategies. The two day meeting, which immediately precedes the main IUPHAR conference in Montreal, will include reports on a broad range of academic and pharmaceutical activities. Sessions include:

- I. Cytokines and Chemokines
- II. Phospholipase A<sub>2</sub> and Cyclooxygenase-2
- III. Cell Adhesion Molecules
- IV. Molecular Approaches to New Therapies

Poster presentations in these and related fields are welcome from participants of the Inflammation Satellite. Proceedings of the meeting will be published in Agents and Actions (Birkhäuser Verlag)
